THE WORLD WILL BE WATCHING

An exciting day this summer seemed to provide the answer to a riddle: What object can block the view of another object 400 times larger than itself? Answer: The moon, of course, on the day of a rare total solar eclipse.

How is that possible? Well, it has to do with a precise positioning of the earth, sun and moon, plus the coincidence of the sun being about 400 times further away from us than our moon. Thus, on August 21st we witnessed the sun entirely obscured by the moon, especially if we were in the “band of totality” that ran diagonally through the states. Hundreds of thousands of people flocked to prime positions to observe the eclipse in full.

Here’s a related size riddle that some of us might confront this winter: What building, approximately 400 times the size of a small apartment, can obliterate the view of an entire region’s lack of affordable housing? That’s an easy one: The U.S. Bank Stadium.

In a similarly rare occurrence, the eyes of the world will be on Minneapolis during the weeks surrounding one of the biggest events on the solar calendar, Super Bowl Sunday. If you are a football fan it is a big deal that we are hosting SB LII. Even if you are not, it is still pretty spectacular to note that millions of people worldwide will be glued to their various screens, and treated to city vistas and our downtown skyline. At some point they will learn of the Stadium’s $1 billion price tag and its 70,000 seat capacity. Many will applaud what we have done to keep football alive and well in the Twin Cities, not to mention scoring a ton of business for local establishments during the festivities. Touchdown!

What most viewers will not see, unless they literally walk from their hotel or rented house to the game, are street people who simply cannot afford a local apartment or a home to live in. Though the game is in February, the spectators will likely not encounter, or hear much about, the over 10,000 homeless people, state-wide, shuddering in the frozen air, sleeping in over-crowded shelters, or camping out under a bridge nearby because we lack the vision and responsibility to work toward affordable housing units for all our citizens. Football fans will almost certainly not be apprised of the fact that our Metro area today has the second worst affordable housing crisis in the nation.

Over the last several years more than 10,000 units of previously affordable housing were up-scaled out of reach of affordability. Some members of our own congregation faced eviction from their apartments whose rent they could no longer handle. Many of our state’s homeless are holding down two or more jobs and still cannot afford rent. It is estimated that in order to meet the demand of our growing population of low to mid income earners, over 50,000 new affordable units will be needed in the metro area by 2020.

You may be asking, well why is this information appearing in the Temple Bulletin and being written by one of our rabbis? For one thing, it is a sad irony that we can host the world sporting community for a week or so but cannot find sustainable adequate housing for the denizens of our own state. We rabbis just cannot resist a sad irony. Also, the lack of inhabitable, affordable dwellings is a significant social justice issue, a religious issue, and as Jews we are not supposed to get in the habit of ignoring such realities.

Additionally, our Jewish calendar is lunar, and when that aforementioned moon is full, smack in the middle of this holiday month of Tishrei, we will celebrate Sukkot, the Festival of Booths. If you have a free moment, come visit the Sukkah we erect annually in our courtyard. While it is a beautifully designed little structure, we are taught that the Sukkah represents the most basic of shelter needs in which human beings should be able to dwell. Even as we celebrate the bounty of our fall harvest festival, indeed all our blessings, we recount an ancient history of our people who were provided by their God with sufficient materials to live.

In those heady biblical days of heavenly miracles I guess that's how it worked. Today, in order to prevent wanderers from freezing to death in the midst of a Minnesota winter (yes, that actually does happen...often), the miracles have to be human-wrought. They occur as a result of advocating on a state level for a remedy to this unconscionable problem; they occur because you and I make it our business to become educated about the facts here on the ground in "progressive" Minnesota. And they occur because we choose not to be silent in the face of ultimate injustices until we have completed the tasks.

The stadium itself is something of a miracle. I remember the hoo-hah when the Vikings owners threatened to pull the team out of the Cities unless we all got behind the construction of a new football arena. $500 million was publicly invested. For the upcoming event the Super Bowl

Planning Committee expects to raise another $30 million in private funding. Is it not amazing what human ingenuity, pride, bargaining, advocating and initiative can accomplish when you really want something to happen? Imagine if we had the same fervor when it comes to providing affordable homes for all!

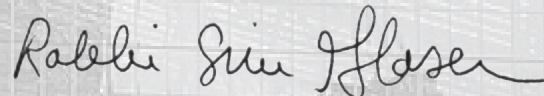

To put this into some kind of perspective, the amount of money that went into building the U.S. Bank Stadium could have created 16,000 units of new affordable housing. The most our state has ever invested in a Housing Bonding Bill was $100 million. That was four years ago and we haven't seen anything like that since.

In just a few months the world will be watching the goings-on in Minneapolis, Minnesota. We will experience no small element of pride in the accomplishment of having garnered a Super Bowl. Would it not be the coup of coups to be able to announce the establishment of a real housing plan here, so that our devotion to putting a roof over a human family matched our success in putting up a billion dollar home for professional sporting events, shows and concerts and hosting a world class event?

The exterior of the stadium boasts over 200,000 square feet of reflective glass.

So how do we look?

B'virkat Shalom - With Blessings of Peace,

Rabbi Sim Glaser

THE ONENESS OF GOD AND THE DIVERSITY OF RELIGIONS: A JEWISH PERSPECTIVE

Temple Israel and the Jay Phillips Center for Interfaith Learning present: The Rabbi Max A. Shapiro Lecture

Rabbi Rachel Sabath Beit-Halachmi, PhD

Monday, October 23, 7:00 p.m. | Free and open to the public.

One of Judaism's most hallowed claims about the reality of God is what Jews refer to as the Sh'ma: "Hear, O Israel, the Eternal is our God, the Eternal is One" (Deut. 6:4). Deeply committed to the affirmation of God's oneness, many Jews also share the belief of Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel (1907-1972) that "diversity of religions is the will of God." In this lecture, Rabbi Sabath Beit-Halachmi will explain why she considers this belief not only compatible with but also demanded by the affirmation of God's oneness.

A native of Minnesota, Rabbi Sabath Beit-Halachmi grew up at Temple Israel and is an alumna of URJ camp OSRUI, a former NFTY

National Vice President, and a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of Wisconsin-Madison. She is President's Scholar and National Director of Recruitment and Admissions at Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion in Cincinnati, where she also heads the Office of Community Engagement. Ordained in 1995 at HUC-JIR, Rabbi Sabath also earned a PhD in Philosophy from the Jewish Theological Seminary of America.

Sponsored by the Max A. Shapiro Rabbinic Lectureship Fund of the Temple Israel Foundation

THE FUND FOR TEMPLE ISRAEL

INTRODUCING THE FUND FOR TEMPLE ISRAEL

Temple Israel is a sacred community that embraces, inspires and matters. We each come to Temple with personal commitments to meaningful Jewish experiences. And, we each find more in community as we engage together.

To sustain and support the vision of our community we have launched a new initiative, The Fund for Temple Israel, which will annually support all that Temple is and does.

SUSTAINABLE SUPPORT

Since 2009, Temple has maintained a balanced budget by including operating support in special campaigns, including L'Dor Vador. The High Holy Days Appeal was also a generous outpouring of annual support for many years. The Fund for Temple Israel will strengthen and expand critical resources to maintain our vibrant congregation.

“The Fund for Temple Israel supports all that Temple is and does. We have great buildings, programs and vision, and we need to fund them to thrive and to grow. Participation is the key. All of us together have a role. Thank you for believing in this sacred work of strengthening and sustaining our Jewish community.”

RABBI ZIMMERMAN
*Alvin & June Perlman
Senior Rabbinic Chair*

LILLIAN & MAX FALLEK

“Since moving to Minneapolis following my Korean War service, Temple Israel has been a most meaningful part of our family life—providing a spiritual foundation in our everyday lives, a place for comfort, inspiration, education and solace. We consider the opportunity to participate in the Fund for Temple Israel truly an honor and a mitzvah.”

JESSI KINGSTON &
BARRY SCHWABE

“The first time I (Jessi) walked through the doors at Temple, I knew I was home. Temple members, clergy and staff were engaging, inviting and warmly greeted me. Over the years, Barry and I have met Temple members who are from all ages and stages of life, new to our community, multi-racial and multi-generation families. We love that we all come together to make Temple a welcoming place for everyone.”

“Temple’s operating strength comes from member donations. We’re excited to launch this new initiative and develop an even stronger financial foundation for Temple to thrive.”

REBECCA LUXENBERG
Treasurer

CASSIE BENOWITZ

“We’re involved in the Jewish community and have ties to other synagogues, but we choose Temple because of the personal and meaningful connections we feel to the clergy and the rituals. Temple meets us where we’re at in a way that feels relevant and beneficial to our lives today.”

“I am proud to be a lifelong participant of the Temple Israel community. Now that I am lucky enough to play a role in the leadership of this great place, I realize how complex an organization it is. The many different populations who walk through our doors have diverse and important needs. We are proud to be a vibrant and innovative institution. Annual giving is, and will continue to be, key in keeping us there.”
