Dear Friends,

Tu BiSh'vat is the Jewish Arbor Day, the anniversary of the trees. Believe it or not, this month of Shevat (usually falling in the wintery month of February) is the beginning of harvesting the fruit of the trees in Israel. The Torah tells us we cannot harvest the fruit for three years in order to maintain the health of the tree. We count these three years from one Tu BiSh'vat to the next, making this holiday essential for farmers.

The wisdom of farmers and our agricultural ancestry is immense. In his book, 40 Chances: Finding Hope in a Hungry World, Howard Buffett, Warren Buffett's son, reflects on his life as a farmer and philanthropist. His book provides further relevance to the wise and cyclical nature of farming and life in general.

He asserts that each of us has "40 chances" to till our soil and harvest our yield – between the time we are given our inheritance from the previous generation and when we must pass it on to the next generation. Forty chances will pass whether or not we are intentional about how we want to make our mark in the world. Forty chances will pass whether or not we are careful about the messages and values we give our children. Forty chances will pass whether or not we are thoughtful about what we leave behind. This is a beautiful metaphor and, during this season of Tu'BiShvat, gives us a framework through which we can reflect on our place in the world, regardless of whether we work the land.

I take Buffett's challenge to heart for Temple Israel. We are at different stages of our "40 chances." Some of us are just beginning to make our mark, having just come of age and been handed from the previous generation the baton of responsibility for Judaism. Others are in the midst of this work – working hard to make Judaism relevant in this fast-paced, technological world. And then there are those who are ready to conclude their work, having lived a life of Judaism and passed it on to their children and grandchildren.

At Temple Israel, each of us – every member of this enduring congregation – has been given the responsibility of keeping this community vibrant, wherever we are in our forty seasons. I feel blessed to be in partnership with so many who care so deeply for this great congregation.

Temple has been a strong Jewish voice in the city of Minneapolis for more than 135 years. Because we have always been an innovative, future-oriented congregation and leaders in Jewish education, Jewish camping, interfaith dialogue and social justice, our address defines our mission and vision.

Now is our time to join hands and be intentional about what we do with the years we have left before we give to our children and grandchildren what was once given to us. We must look to our Jewish traditions and teachings to make important decisions about our Temple community. With our collective wisdom, and with your thoughtful involvement, we will make good decisions, just as our parents and grandparents did for us.

B'virvat Shalom – With Blessings of Peace,

Rabbi Marcia A. Zimmerman

Lighting the Way

“There is a feeling at Temple that penetrates. There is a warmth. It can bring tears to your eyes. I feel Jewish there.”

– Congregants Barbara & Ron Harris

Remembering A Best Friend And Beloved Parents The Sidney, Arlene and Robert Shapiro Memorial Endowment

Joey Shapiro grew up with his best friend. It was his brother, Bobby.

They played tennis and golf together, skied, and shared dreams and hopes. Just one year apart in age, they were inseparable. “We did everything together,” Joey said of Bobby. “He was one of the kindest, most cheerful people I’ve ever known.”

Their parents, Arlene and Sid, taught their three sons – Joey, Bobby and their older brother Alan – to work hard, be generous, and share their successes with others. Sid owned a small printing shop in Minneapolis for about 20 years, and the boys grew up around the business. They watched how the printing process was done, got to see what came off the printing presses, and heard their parents talking about the business.

All this came to a halt when Sid sold the company in 1972. Suffering from early onset Alzheimer’s, he died while the boys were still in their late teens and early 20s. Their beloved mother, Arlene, eventually remarried Irving Efron but she, too, died at a young age.

Just four years after their father’s shop was sold, Bobby, Joey and Alan found themselves applying what their parents had taught them. Bobby started a new print company as a means of reestablishing the Shapiros in the printing business. The idea was for Bobby to run the business day in and day out, while Joey and Alan would serve as partners and help as much as they could as they completed their university studies and launched their careers.

Shapco Printing was formed, and within a year Joey joined the business full time. “Bobby would work 100-hour weeks in those early years, and I would join him. His leadership accounted for much of the business’ success,” Joey said. Another year later, Alan joined the business full time, as well.

Sidney & Arlene Shapiro

A legacy of hard work, success and generosity throughout the community ended for Bobby in 2011. At the age of 56, he died of early onset Alzheimer’s, the same disease that had taken his dad.

“(My wife) Cindy and I are proud to honor the memories of my immediate family with the establishment of the Sidney, Arlene and Robert Shapiro Memorial Endowment Fund,” Joey said. “Sidney and Arlene were wonderful people who taught us how important it is to give back to the community. Bobby was loved by all who knew him and he, too, was very generous.

“They would all be happy to know that their names are associated with a great institution like Temple Israel. The goodness and kindness they expressed in their lives will be memorialized by this fund.”
