CLERGY VOICE

Dear Friends,

There is a well-known and often used Jewish story about Honi. One day Honi was journeying on the road and he saw a man planting a carob tree. Honi asked, "How long does it take [for this tree] to bear fruit?" The man replied, "Seventy years." Honi then wondered, "Are you certain that you will live another seventy years?" The man replied, "I found grown carob trees in the world; as my forefathers planted those for me, so I, too, plant these for my children."

Recently this idea has been reverberating in my mind, causing me to ask many questions. Am I doing everything I can do to ensure a sustainable living environment for my children's children? Are we planting enough trees—literal and symbolic—for the generations to follow us?

I am especially struck by these questions when I go to throw something away. As I take a moment to determine if what I hold in my hand belongs in the trash, recycling, or organics bin, I cannot help but wonder how we moved so far from the Jewish principle of Bal Tashchit—do not destroy or waste. Our scholars teach that this applies to wasting energy, clothing, water, money, and more. According to Rabbi Sampson Rafael Hirsch, this is the most comprehensive warning to human beings to not misuse our position as inhabitants of the world, to not thoughtlessly waste or destroy anything on earth. Somehow, with industrialization and our increasingly fast pace of life, humanity forgot that God commanded us not to spoil or destroy these sacred gifts.

There are sources of hope to be found, however. Our city and congregation understand what it means to take care of our planet, as we all move toward a more sustainable future (see page 13 for more on what Temple is doing).

I am so incredibly proud that Temple Israel is a leader in sustainability by collecting organics, converting to energy-efficient LED lighting, and using compostable dishes and utensils for events. Yet, what I am even more inspired by is what is happening in our Early Childhood Center (ECC).

RABBI HARTMAN

When I walk into the ECC classrooms, I see three receptacles clearly marked—trash, recycling, and organics. They are easily accessible for learners, and these preschool and pre-k children can already distinguish what goes where. It truly gives me hope when I see that these 2-, 3-, and 4-year-olds know how to take care of our planet. They are helping us every day to get to a future when we can say that Temple Israel produces zero waste.

If Jewish environmental principles and spiritual practices are applied only on special trips to the wilderness or to the farm, their impact will remain both physically and spiritually peripheral to everyday life. Achieving our goals of a more sustainable future will depend on all of us making a commitment: not to performing random acts of sustainability, but to changing our habits and culture. I look forward to working with you in sowing the seeds and planting the trees toward a better future for our children's children and all generations to come.

B'virkat Shalom—With Blessings of Peace,

Rabbi Jennifer S.G. Hartman

America's Got Shofar! (And So Will You) With Dr. Michael Klein and Rabbi Jason Klein

Monday, July 22, 7:00 p.m.

The High Holy Days will be here before you know it—tune up for the New Year by learning how to play the shofar! Your preconceived notions of how difficult it is may be "blown away" by this introduction for all ages. You may bring your own horn or try some we will have on hand. No prior experience necessary. A physician by day, Mike Klein started playing brass instruments when he was 11, but only discovered in his 30s that the shofar is played the same way. Half a lifetime later, he teaches shofar to all ages and backgrounds and likes to say that shofar blasts are "easy" compared to traditional bugle calls, most of which can be played on a long shofar. Email jklein@templeisrael.com to RSVP or for more information.

Mystical Thought in the Talmud and Rabbinic Period

Many are the warnings about the study of mysticism and its dangers. Four of the great sages were said to have ventured into the PaRDeS, or orchard of mystical thought and practice, with only Rabbi Akiva emerging unscathed. Why? How should Kabbalah be taught, and to whom? What were they worried about? What was the role of the famous Talmudic mystic Rabbi Shimon bar Yochai?

Bright Nights with Rabbi Klein

Tuesday, August 6, 7:00 p.m.

Mayim Rabim Congregation, 4401 York Avenue South, Minneapolis

The moon can be a symbol of decline, but it is also a symbol of constancy for the Jewish people, and a symbol that might have resonance for the LGBTQ+ community and all people who have been “othered.” In the days preceding Tishah B'Av, explore the queer, imaginative tradition of Kiddush Levanah—the sanctification of the moon—and some related texts that amplify the season's themes of comfort and protection. This program is presented by Mayim Rabim Congregation, Temple Israel, and JPride.

Tishah B'Av

Begins at sundown on Saturday, August 10 and continues through Sunday, August 11

Tishah B'Av, observed on the 9th (tishah) of the Hebrew month of Av, is a day of mourning the destruction of both ancient Temples in Jerusalem. Tishah B'Av has become a symbol of Jewish suffering and loss. Over the centuries, other tragic events have come to be commemorated on this day, including the brutal massacres of the Crusades, the Jewish expulsion from Spain, and the Holocaust. Today, Tishah B'Av stands as a day to reflect on the suffering that still occurs in our world. Traditionally, Tishah B'Av is a time set aside for fasting and mourning. The fast extends from sundown until the following sundown. In some synagogues, the Book of Lamentations is chanted, as are sections of the books of Jeremiah and Job, as well as passages from the Bible and the Talmud that deal with the Temples' destruction in 586 B.C.E. and 70 C.E.

As Temple Israel Clergy prepared to join with our JEWL team for the last days of the JEWL year, Rabbi Hartman suggested that we give our learners a homework assignment, one that her childhood rabbi would impart to the congregation each summer.

So on the morning of May 5 in our sanctuary, hundreds of our young people, who might not see one another or their teachers for the next few months, were given these three instructions:

- 1. Read a new book,
- 2. Sing a new song, and
- 3. Make a new friend.

And then—come back from whatever summer experiences lie ahead, and tell us about them.

I think the lessons here apply broadly and go deep. First, just because one might not be spending most of their time near a classroom in July or August, it does not mean that learning should end. Next, we learn in a variety of ways: books might start by engaging our intellect and songs can capture our hearts. Yet, books at their best inspire, and songs make us think. As a psychologist once reminded me, our brain is not so neatly divided into left and right, and our subconscious mind is integrated with our awareness. Perhaps the third instruction is the most powerful: making a new friend reminds us of that learning for our whole lives should be relational. It is not enough just to do it on our own, but as the Talmud teaches us, when two people come together to learn something new, the Shechina, God’s very presence, sits with them.

Perhaps it is stating the obvious to say that I do not think that the wisdom Rabbi Hartman imparted about summertime should be limited to the pre-B’nai Mitzvah years! From the close of the rainy season in the land of Israel to the last days of school right here, we might think of summer as a time of endings.

Yet summer is a time of generativity as well. Just as the morning dew protects the growing crops gently, allowing growth in anticipation of the fall harvest, so can we, regardless of our age or stage, seek out ways to feel comfort at this time of year, and also be pushed to our limits so we, too, will grow. From paddleboards on Bde Maka Ska to new experiences at camps and cabins, this is a special time to blossom.

So please share with us—your clergy and your education team—what you are reading, what you are singing, and whom you are getting to know, so we can learn with you, from you, and share some of the lessons of summer’s growth.

TEMPLE'S NEW BOARD PRESIDENT

President Jed Stillman was installed on Friday, May 31.

This is an excerpt from his remarks at services.

I became involved in Temple's leadership when our last president, Tom Hoffman, invited me to participate in the strategic planning process. For me it began an education about Temple, how Jewish communities are changing, and how synagogues are returning to their traditional place at the center of the Jewish community.

Our most recent strategic plan was approved last May. The process engaged nearly 500 congregants in discussions about what makes Temple great, what could be improved, and also took a sober look at what challenges we face today and those we might encounter over the next decade. From this work came a compelling roadmap that respects what is core to Temple while addressing our continuously evolving needs. Here are a few examples.

Camp TEKO has experienced a renaissance in programming and attendance. Nearly 50 more campers went to TEKO last year than in the prior year, and 30 campers were waitlisted. We have an opportunity to bring great Jewish camping to more kids, but answering these challenges requires further investment so that the physical structures can catch up to the great experience.

The strategic plan also addresses how we fill Temple's wonderful spaces with equally great experiences. This comprises many things, but a few examples include clergy capacity, lifelong learning, and social justice opportunities.

Additional clergy capacity is necessary to keep pace with congregational life cycle events (like the roughly 750 annual hospital visits). We also need more capacity to develop innovative social and religious experiences. Within our Lifelong Learning program, JEWL had nearly 400 students this year. Our Social Justice Task Force just signed up 100 volunteers. Work like this is a double blessing in that it both brings congregants together in common purpose and builds upon Temple's sense of community.

Thank you all so much for this opportunity to serve Temple Israel; I recognize the weight of the responsibility and I promise I will do my best.

Kadimah—onward—and let us go from strength to strength.

JED STILLMAN

SISTERHOOD NEWS

Sisterhood had another successful year in our involvement with the Jeremiah Program. We served four meals this year to young mothers and their children who are residents and attend school. Residents and staff continue to appreciate our support.

This year Sisterhood provided funding for each meal. Volunteers prepared and served the meals. We will continue funding the meals next year. So far we have two of our four dates, which are Thursdays, October 22 and December 5, 2019.

As the coordinator, I would like to thank Sisterhood for their support. I would like to give a special thanks to the following volunteers who were instrumental in making it a success: Holly Weinstine, Karen Malver, and Aviva Breen. If you are interested in getting involved, please call me.

MEN'S CLUB NEWS

Thank you to all who contributed financially through our membership drive this year. Many of you chose to support us through donations. To that, we say "Keep up the good work!"

We can't do our programming without contributions, and we can't do it without volunteers. Another thank you goes out to all Men's Club members and additional volunteers (men and women) who participated in our activities this year. We had upwards of 35 participants, with five or six first-timers.

One of our more successful social action activities is the breakfast we serve at the St. Stephens Shelter every third Sunday. We recently added the second Sunday of each month, so we are going to need additional volunteers. See page 12 for information.

To volunteer or get on the mailing list, contact us.

Still your co-presidents,

Jed Marquisee, 612-309-8663, jmarquisee@aol.com

Volunteers are needed to serve dinners every other month on the fourth Tuesday (July, October, November) at St. Stephen's School (22nd and Clinton) from 5:00–7:00 p.m. We are especially looking for families with children ages 12 and above. Contact Nancy Proman at 612-281-9415 or nproman@aol.com.

THE BRIDGE FOR YOUTH

Join us on the first and third Tuesdays of each month from 5:00–7:30 p.m. for Tacos & Trivia! Bring your team in to show off your cooking and trivia skills as you connect with youth experiencing homelessness. Contact Amanda at 612-230-6685 or a.beckett@bridgeforyouth.org.

ST. STEPHEN'S SHELTER FOR MEN BREAKFAST Second and Third Sundays of Each Month

Join us as we cook and serve hot breakfast at St. Stephen's Shelter for men. We meet at 7:00 a.m. to cook and serve; we are done by 8:15 a.m. To sign up or for more information, please contact Jed Marquisee at 612-309-8663 or jmarquisee@aol.com.

IMMIGRATION JUSTICE AT TEMPLE

In 2018, Temple Israel's Board of Directors passed a resolution endorsing Temple's commitment to Immigration Justice, envisioning a program of education, advocacy, and action in support of immigrants and refugees. If you are interested in learning more about Temple's Immigration Justice initiative and opportunities to become involved, please email Allison Wolf at allison.l.wolf@gmail.com.

JEFFERSON SCHOOL

Jefferson's Media Center needs assistance re-shelving books and help with checking out, the arts class is looking for aides, and the after school classes need adults who would be interested in teaching a special skill once a week. Volunteers can also assist with other classes. Contact Roger Conhaim at 612-374-9454.

SHOLOM HOME

Volunteers at Sholom Home West in St. Louis Park are the heart and soul supporting that community of elders. Responsibilities include transporting residents, calling BINGO, delivering mail, Music and Memory classes, visiting and reading, or just kibitzing. There are many opportunities, and the work is much appreciated! Contact Avi Economos at 612-799-7429.

HELP FAMILIES EXPERIENCING HOMELESSNESS

Volunteer for Temple Israel's Shelter for Families Experiencing Homelessness

Sunday, June 30–Sunday, July 14

Temple Israel will host families through our partnership with Families Moving Forward (FMF) this July. We need help setting up bedrooms, cooking and serving food, and playing with and entertaining the children. In addition, we need adults to stay over each night at Temple and see our guests off in the morning. For more information or to volunteer, please contact Marcy Frost at mfrost@marcyfrostlaw.com or 612-382-7966.

SUSTAINABILITY NOW

TEMPLE ADOPTS SUSTAINABILITY GOALS

Temple Israel's Board of Directors has long recognized that "sustainability"—often defined as our ability to meet the needs of today without compromising the ability of our planet to meet the needs of future generations—is indeed a Jewish value. Many people may not know that in 2005, Temple installed a small array of solar panels on the roof of the sanctuary, more than enough to power the Ner Tamid, making it a truly holy light (because it is powered by the sun, as opposed to the utility grid, which is powered primarily by coal and natural gas).

"If I am not for myself, who will be for me?

But if I am only for myself, then what am I?

And if not now, when?"

— Rabbi Hillel, Mishneh Avot, first century CE

In the spring of 2018, Temple Israel's Board approved a strategic plan that includes these two key goals related to sustainability:

- 1. Integrate sustainability and its practice across all Temple Israel facilities, programming, education, planning, and operations.
- 2. Continue to upgrade Temple Israel's facilities using a sustainability lens, including Camp TEKO, a renovated Emerson campus kitchen, and greater cemetery capacity.

This language is similar to what was adopted in the 2010 strategic plan, so it's not that new. But the exciting part is how far we have come in our attitude towards the importance of sustainability, and how we can (and must) be a leader in the community. With more dire predictions of climate change, and the knowledge that buildings are responsible for 39% of the greenhouse gas emissions that lead to climate change, Temple is stepping up. As a current Board member who has been a sustainability champion for years (as well as a LEED accredited professional and author of the recent book, Building a Sustainable Home: Practical Green Design Choices for Your Health, Wealth, and Soul), I have the honor of being in charge of this task.

MELISSA RAPPAPORT SCHIFMAN

So earlier this year, I gave a presentation to the Board and other interested members, where I outlined how to frame this massive topic, and where Temple can focus its efforts. (Anyone who wants to see my presentation, please email me at Lissie@green-intention.com.) The result? Temple Israel has adopted two aspirational goals: Net Zero Carbon Emissions and Net Zero Waste by 2030.

God said to Adam, "Behold my works! See how beautiful they are, how excellent! All that I have created for your sake did I create it. See to it that you do not spoil and destroy my world; For if you do, there will be no one to repair it after you."—Ecclesiastes Rabbah 7:13

How we are going to get there is up to us. If you have expertise in this arena and want to participate, or have questions and comments, please let me know. We'll be using this space in Hakol for updates—and there are many. It's an exciting time to be here; we cannot afford to wait.

A Thank You From Cantor Havilio

Another turning point, a fork stuck in the road

Time grabs you by the wrist, directs you where to go

So make the best of this test and don't ask why

It's not a question, but a lesson learned in time.

It's something unpredictable, but in the end it's right

I hope you had the time of your life.

These words by the band Green Day have been running through my mind as we pack up our things and re-live memories of the past year as we prepare to return to Israel. Shmulik, Nadav, Tal, Noam, and I have so much gratitude for our time that we have had living within your beautiful and joyful community. We all have truly had "the time of our lives."

TALMUD TODAY

TRACTATE TI 3A

RABBI KLEIN SAYS

Various accounts of Rabbi Bar Yochai's life suggest that, while the Romans were persecuting him, he found refuge in a cave and was sustained by the fruit of the trees there. This sage knew firsthand that even the heights of spirituality are impossible without the physical sustenance provided by the natural world. My biology teacher liked to say with a smile that "plants are smarter than humans" because they photosynthesize their own food. Sometimes we humans refer to "saving the planet," yet I think euphemistically we mean saving our species. Perhaps humanity can be "smart," too, by being modest enough to recognize that the earth is much bigger than we are and visionary enough to make better long-term choices.

RABBI MOSS SAYS

Somebody is always coming down the road promising that all your problems are about to be solved by a new technology, fitness program, political movement, investment opportunity, or, as we see in this text, by the arrival of the Messiah. Though these supposed panaceas usually turn out to be false promises, sometimes they do contain true value. We should neither fully ignore the possibility of good news nor unthinkingly embrace every tempting report. Therefore, Shimon Bar Yochai teaches a cautious optimism: take responsibility for the job at hand, and then go check for yourself just who or what has arrived.

Shimon bar Yochai taught that "if you are holding a sapling in your hand and someone says that the Messiah has drawn near, first plant the sapling, and then go and greet the Messiah."

—Avot d'Rebbe Natan 31b

RABBI GLASER SAYS

While not everyone in the world is equally culpable in the current warming of our planet, we all have a role to play in reducing the extent of climate change. The book of Genesis clearly mandates humanity as stewards over the earth. The great Rabbi/Mystic Shimon Bar Yochai taught that this can be compared to a group of people who were out in a boat fishing. One of them took a drill and began to bore a hole in the bottom of the boat under his seat. His fellow passengers said to him: "Why are you doing this?" He calmly replied: "What do you care? Am I not drilling only under my own seat?"

RABBI ZIMMERMAN SAYS

I grew up in a time when parents told their children to eat everything on their plates because children were starving across the world. My cousin would challenge my aunt, saying that she would eat her broccoli when her mother could name three of those children. Today we teach our children to take what they can eat, because we want a zero-waste meal.

Truly, the facts are startling. Americans waste 27% of the food available for consumption and generate 30 tons of food waste a year, which equals 12% of the total waste stream. This needs to be eliminated. I am grateful that every week in the city of Minneapolis compost is picked up curbside. Yohanan Ben Bag said, "Turn it and turn it for everything is in it." He was thinking about Torah, but turning and turning the waste we produce naturally creates a rich, fertilizing soil that feeds trees and plants and sustains our earth. Not only should we continue to plant a tree in the presence of the Messiah, but we should also feed the tree with the beautifully rich, dark food of our completed waste.

CHANGE SERVICE REQUESTED

Thank you to our generous supporters, volunteers, and guests for making our VOICES benefit on May 21 such a successful and memorable evening. We were pleased to welcome Ana Navarro and Van Jones, who shared their personal journeys and their thoughts on unity, civil discourse, and the future of our country. Thank you to our moderator, Ambassador Samuel Kaplan, for wonderfully leading the discussion.

We are grateful to all who supported Temple through this event. Our mission, programming, and outreach are possible only through your generosity. A very special thank-you to Lynne & Andy Redleaf, our event chairs and Presenting Sponsors, and to Eloise & Elliot Kaplan, Presenting Sponsors.

See page 18 for a list of all VOICES sponsors.
