Rabbi Gertman

Dear Friends,

The sages taught: I have learned much wisdom from my teacher, more from my colleagues and the most from my students.

A great pleasure of being a rabbi at Temple Israel is learning from our youth. Whenever I am with them I learn something new – a new word, a new phrase, a new expression. Your children keep me updated on the latest lingo, the hottest fashion trends, and they’ve even coerced me into taking the occasional “selfie.” I am truly honored that they are willing to share with me their lives and their experiences. I am also constantly amazed by how quickly their world moves. They have constant and immediate access to information. They have the universe at their “literal” fingertips – between their phones, tablets, computers – they are able to Google facts faster than I can say them.

We, as Jewish educators, are challenged to teach our students what cannot be found on the Internet – values, morals, community. This means that we need to give our students experiences that help them integrate Jewish values into their lives. We need to speak to their hearts. As teachers we also need to make sure that we are giving our students a platform where they can express their thoughts and beliefs, where they can explore their world, and where they can investigate new understandings of Judaism.

As teachers we want to ensure that we stimulate our students’ minds, motivate their bodies, and ignite their souls. We want them to know facts, but we also believe in allowing them to form their own ideas. We want them to feel that they belong to the community, and actively participate in tikkun olam, making this world a better place. We want them to do this inside of our walls and when they leave the Temple Israel building. Our education team, led by Andy Halper, works hard to ensure that our educational model aligns with the ever-changing world in which our students live.

This year, I am thrilled to use the Twin Cities as our classroom to learn Jewish texts and traditions with our middle school students. We will learn how Judaism commands us to treat our world, our community and ourselves. We will do this by traveling to an apple orchard, where we will learn how the Jewish laws around farming shape our commandment to give tzedakah. We will do this by traveling to the Twins stadium to learn how their emphasis on sustainability aligns with Jewish laws to protect our world. We will do this by spending time with students from the Basilica, as well as from the Darkenu program for children with special needs. We will learn as teens live – by doing, by interacting, by experiencing. Jewish education, like all education, is a lifelong endeavor. We are so excited to be giving your children the tools they need to continue along this path into adulthood and beyond.

B’virkat Shalom—With Blessings of Peace,

Rabbi Jennifer S. Gertman

From the Ceremonial Groundbreaking

Views from the congregation and the community

“This project has been in movement for so many years, and it is happening because of all the people who have been involved from the beginning. The volunteers, the staff—all the congregants who are working on, and have worked on, all the many aspects of this endeavor from strategic planning, to program planning, to facilities planning, and now to fundraising and construction.” – Temple President Roberta Bonoff

“What we are doing is renewing Temple facilities and renewing Temple programs to meet today’s world, to have better access to technology, and to give children and parents with disabilities full access to our Temple building. Over and over we have reaffirmed our commitment to the city. That is why we have named this campaign L’Dor Vador, to strengthen our congregation and our community in the city of Minneapolis for many generations ahead.” – Honorary Campaign Co-Chair Elliot Kaplan

“It is involvement in the community, and with the community, that is so important. Rabbi Max Shapiro, one of my faith mentors, captured the essence of Temple Israel in a 1964 sermon. He said: ‘Judaism instructs us to do more... For no community, no city, no nation can long endure divided - half affluent, half despairing.’ Temple Israel has always reached out to both communities. For that, I salute you. I congratulate you on this historic and continuing work.” – Governor Mark Dayton

“Temple Israel is special because of the way it interacts with our neighborhoods. I see its senior rabbi, Rabbi Marcia Zimmerman, leading this community on interfaith dialogue and cross-cultural interactions. I see our neighborhoods’ children having the opportunity to attend an early childhood education program that both breathes spirituality and religion into their daily lives and also lets them be who they are. And I see the way you are open to our community, from AA meetings in the building to SPCO playing in the beautiful sanctuary.” – Minneapolis City Council Member Lisa Goodman

“The ceremonial bottle containing earth from the site of the Rabbi Max A. Shapiro education building reminds us of those who came before us, on whose shoulders we stand—and it reminds us, as well, of our children, our future, our gathering place, and of being in the center of this vibrant and beautiful city we call Minneapolis, we call home. When we come back a year from now, we will plant a beautiful tree with the earth that we have taken from this site to link us with next year, the year after that, 50 years from now, and 150 years from now—l’dor vador, from generation to generation.” – Senior Rabbi Marcia A. Zimmerman

The Temple Israel Committee to End Homelessness (TICEH) Needs You!

On any given night, over 10,000 Minnesotans live without a home and 46% of those are youth 21 years or younger. People live without a home because we as a society allow that to happen. But there is something members of Temple Israel can do about homelessness!

The TICEH works to address the social injustice of homelessness by doing three things: 1) we educate people about the problem of homelessness, 2) we ask our state legislators to pass laws that benefit those without a home, and 3) we work with organizations that provide direct services to those living without a home.

The Torah tells us time and again that for Israel to become “a kingdom of priests and a holy nation,” it is up to us to create a society of justice, equity, and love.

We invite you to join TICEH and the work we are doing to create a more just society by addressing the problem of homelessness. We are a committee dedicated to action and we only meet as a committee once or twice a year. There are many opportunities for you to be as involved as you want to be and anything you do on this committee is impactful.
